For Both Sexes—City.

A FAMILIAR TALK IN BUSINESS EDUCATION. I have spoken of this forthcoming little book on two occasions in this column. It will be ready for distribution Wednesday morning next, and can be had by addressing the undersigned. The book, under a thin disguise, is really an advertisement of Packard's Business College, but it has the merit of candor and straightforward dealing. There are a good many plain and suggestive things to be said about well-educated business college; and I have attempted to say them here. The "conveyation" is supposed to be between a visitor and a teacher, who is school-bred, both fairly intelligent and occasionally bright. The visitor, who "has a boy to place in school," has his eyes open, and doesn't hesitate to probe the weakness of business colleges, as he understands them; and the representative does his best to show the visitor that he doesn't understand them at all. But he is, after all, a fair representative, and claims nothing for the school that cannot be easily accomplished—in fact, nothing that is not accomplished.

It is not expected that the price of this book will induce anybody to purchase it at present, for there are but a few weeks before the summer vacation; but it will set people to thinking, perhaps, and the result will be that on the opening day, Sept. 5, the available seats will be nearly all taken. That is really the main purpose of the book. Address
